HOCKING VALLEY MINERS OUT OF WORK

NO APPARENT ILL FEELING FOLLOWING ACTION OF HALL

Operators Say they Would Rather Lose Money Than Good Will of 35 Years—Glouster Men Are Anxious To Get Back On the Job—Uncertain When They Will Be Ordered to Return to Work In the Mines.

More than a thousand men, called out of the four mines of the Ohio Collieries company, by the state president of the United Mine Workers of America, are still awaiting a decision as to whether or not they may return to work.

Refusal of the company to employ miners from the Sugar Creek district which has been shut down for more than two months, is said to have caused the disagreement between the mine union official and the Ohio Collieries company.

Under the contract when the company shuts down one of its mines in a certain district it must employ the miners out of work in the other mines still operating. When 300 men were told by union heads to report for work at Glouster, it is said the company refused them employment on the ground that Sugar Creek is not in the same district as Glouster.

It is said that the miners are eager to return to work, but in the meantime are sitting around in stores and congregating on corners.

There is no ill feeling in the Glouster district, as the mines working are paying the Jacksonville scale and no attempt has been made to lower the prices. Operators allege that they are not making any money, but would rather take their losses while operating the mines and supplying customers with coal than to drop out of the field and allow the business to go to the West Virginia and Kentucky operators, who at the present time have the advantage of greatly lower labor costs and also a freight rate preference over the Ohio operators.

The Sunday Creek Coal company, which is operating one mine near to Glouster and is reported to be operating three mines near Corning, asserts that it would rather take its losses in this manner, as it has been in the business for more than 35 years and has in that time established a patronage which it would not want to lose by the failure to supply coal when it is wanted.

Glouster has not been as hard hit during the past two years as have other towns in the Hocking Valley, it seems. Due to the efforts of the operators to keep the mines working, there has been some work, and the miners have not had to face a two years' period of idleness. True, some of the merchants are carrying large accounts with the miners, but have no fear but that they will ultimately get their money. The miners in the Glouster district are largely native Americans, and the foreigners who are there are classed as good citizens, owning their own homes and making regular deposits in the banks, when possible.

In Athens business is considered "dead" by merchants, due to the long shutdown of the mines, but Ohio university during the winter months adds 2,000 to the towns population.

There are, however, a considerable number of miners living in Athens who were employed in the mines at Sugar Creek and other nearby towns. Sugar Creek mines have been shut down for more than two months, and the little village is lifeless. Many of the miners who formerly lived there have moved away, and at the present time are in Glouster.

CHILD KILLED IN RUNAWAY NEAR AMANDA

Five Year Old Boy Hurlled to Death From Buggy—Horse Was Frightened.

Robert, five year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Fetherolf, residing on the Charles Carpenter farm, two and one-half miles north of Amanda, was instantly killed Thursday afternoon, when he was thrown from a buggy during a runaway.

With several brothers and sisters the lad was on his way to haul water for stock, when the horse suddenly became frightened and dashed down the road, throwing the children from the buggy and smashing the vehicle.

The other youngsters were only bruised by their fall, but John struck his head on a rock and lived for only a few moments.

The deceased was one of eight children. Funeral services were held at 10 o'clock Saturday.

GASOLINE TAX COLLECTIONS FOUR MONTHS

Next Year Fund Will be Sufficient for Maintenance of All Roads.

Columbus, O., Aug. 22. (UP).—The first statistics have been announced in a report of the state tax commission on the gasoline tax.

The period covered was from April 18 to August 21. During that time the total amount of gasoline used was 177,793,679 gallons. This consumption with a tax of two cents per gallon returned a revenue of $3,555,873.58.

At the time the gasoline tax was instituted public opinion was against it because of the popular belief the price of gas would be raised without returning sufficient revenue to aid in road construction and maintenance.

These figures, however, disprove that theory the commission announced.

The largest consumption of gas was for the month of June, totaling 54,021,925 gallons. The tax on this was $1,083,908.04.

Under the tax law, a sinking fund was created from which consumers using gasoline for purposes other than transportation would be reimbursed the tax paid. The tax is only on motor vehicles using gasoline for transportation. Stationary engines or gasoline pumps do not come under the tax.

During the period included in the report 971 claims were filed for a refund of taxes. The amount allowed on these totaled $25,102.96.

The commission declared under the provisions of the law the returns from the gasoline tax would in another year be sufficient to pay for the maintenance of all state roads.

PAINFUL ACCIDENT.

George A. Deffenbaugh, who lives two miles east of Laurelville, met with a serious accident Friday, while engaged in siding up a barn.

He was standing on a board known as a nail pull, when it gave away and threw him headlong to the ground, a distance of eighteen feet. His left arm was broken and he also sustained severe cuts and bruises above the right eye on his forehead. Dr. E. Hemmeger, of Adelphi, attended to his injuries. Mr. Deffenbaugh was brought to this city by his attending physician and an X-Ray was made of the injury by Dr. D. V. Courtwright.

STEP TO END RECEIVERSHIP DISCOUNT CO.

Application is Made Before Cleveland Court for Sale of Company's Assets.

The first formal step towards lifting of the receivership in which the Cleveland Discount Co., of which Josiah Kirby was formerly president, has been held for more than three years, stood completed Friday in common pleas court.

Application for a court order authorizing sale of the firm's assets was set for hearing before Common Pleas Judge Pearson, September 10, by Judge Dan B. Cull.

Should no opposition develop to the plan, as presented to Judge Cull by Gardner Abbott, one of the receivers of the company and J. M. Berne, attorney for the receivers, the way will be cleared for the final windup of the firm's affairs.

By the first of the new year, it was predicted, the receivership will have ended.

The program for the sale of the assets as outlined before Judge Cull by Berne and Abbott, suggests turning over of assets held by receivers in California and New York to receivers in Cleveland, and application by the ancillary receivers for dismissal by courts in their respective states.

The New York and California receivers, Berne said, have assured Cleveland receivers of their willingness to cooperate, and already have begun steps toward completing their part in the program.

The hearing September 10, is expected to result in a public sale some time in October and probable purchase of the assets by company reorganization managers who have evinced a willingness to bring about the peaceful end of the firm's affairs in this manner.

The reorganization managers represent about $4,393,744 in creditors' unsecured claims of 95 per cent of the company's unsecured liabilities.

Claims of secured creditors, totaling approximately $7,149,700 in collateral bonds, would be carried on while the remaining 7 per cent of the unsecured creditors would have their claims settled on a pro rata basis.

CAMPAIGN OF ARRESTS FOR LIQUOR RAID

Senator Bender Has Filed Suit For $50,000 Against Prohibition Agents.

(United Press)

Cleveland — An active campaign of suits and arrests of public officials was started here Friday against the "liquor raid menace."

State Senator George H. Bender, ardent dry and author of many Ohio prohibition laws filed suit for $50,000 against W. J. Patrick, state dry agent and naming B. F. McDonald, state dry director as co-defendant. On a flimsy rumor Patrick raided his home for Canadian beer and bonded whisky and found nothing Bender charged.

France Wiggins filed a suit for $25,000 late Thursday charging that a raid led by Patrick frightened his wife and resulted in the death of his unborn child.

Six constables and former constables were arrested by federal authorities for "unwarranted liquor raids." Warrants are out for three justices operating peace courts in suburbs of Cleveland.

Feed Calves Enough but Don't Overfeed

Do Best if Kept Just a Little Bit Hungry.

Feed the calves enough, but don't overfeed them. They will do better if kept just a little hungry. Overfeeding causes digestive troubles.

These are some of the suggestions made by the department of animal husbandry of the New York State Agricultural college at Ithaca on the raising and care of calves.

The first thing to remember, says the college, is that no calf should be raised for dairy use unless it comes of first-class parentage—from a pure-bred sire and a high-producing dam. Granting this heritage, the dairy calf will respond to, and should receive, careful handling.

It is best to let the calves stay with their mothers for two or three days after birth. Then they should be taught to drink from a bucket. Care should be taken to see that the pail is clean for, as every farmer knows, calves are subject to digestive disorders.

The calf should get from 6 to 12 pounds of whole milk daily for the first three weeks and then may be gradually switched over to skim milk and a little grain. Most farmers find it best to give the calf its grain immediately after it has finished drinking the milk. A good concentrate allowance will contain muscle and bone-building nutrients and will contain some fat to replace a part of that abstracted from the milk.

Here are three rations which have been found good:

Corn 3 parts, bran 3 parts, oats 4 parts, oil meal 1 part.

Corn 5 parts, oats or bran 3 parts, oil meal 1 part.

Oats 3 parts, bran 1 part, oil meal 1 part.

Banking Celery Late in

Summer Is Best Scheme

Most of the growth in celery occurs late in summer when the weather is beginning to turn cool and from then on till freezing weather. When the ground is becoming cool, in September, the soil should be pulled up around the plants a little at a time until it is half way to the top. Before much soil is drawn up, the bunches should be tied. This is quickly done by beginning at one end of a row with a ball of twine, one end of which is tied to a stake driven in the ground. Beginning with the first bunch of celery, draw the leaves together with one hand, and with the other make a turn of the string about that bunch, then on to the next without cutting the string, merely keeping it tight between stalks. In this way the leaves are held compactly together without being tied too tightly.

Not before frost should more earth be thrown up, for it tends to rot the stalks if banked while the weather is warm. Celery will stand a killing frost or even a light freeze without injury, but will be destroyed if frozen hard. When the earth is cool, some time between the first frost and the freezing of the ground, the soil should be drawn up from each side to within a few inches of the top. Double rows will save some labor in banking. Some make a practice of adding more earth with the approach of cold weather, then a covering of litter or corn fodder, so that the celery may be left where it grew through the winter storage period. This method requires a great deal of labor both in storing and taking out, and is not to be recommended.

FARM NOTES

Sweet clover can be pastured in the fall.

A fresh green forage crop will keep the growing pigs coming along fast.

Hens found on nests at night should be shut up. Broody hens reduce production.

Don't feed carcasses of animals that have died of disease to any of your stock or chickens.

Barley straw is similar to wheat straw, and barley hay has more protein and less fiber than timothy hay.

It is certainly worth while to give the sheep the very best possible care nowadays when wool and mutton are both scarce and high-priced.

More food animals were slaughtered in the United States last year than ever before. The total was 119,980,500, or about 1.1 for every man, woman and child in the country.

The consumption of milk in the United States has increased 25 per cent since 1920, but our per capita consumption is still lower than the principal dairy countries of Europe.

At least 50 per cent of all live-stock losses in transit are preventable by co-operation of the railroads, shippers and producers, say officials of the new Live Stock Loss Prevention Association of Ohio.

By storing vegetables for late fall and winter use and using a holed to produce for late winter and early spring, the summer garden can be supplemented and a supply of vegetables will be available the year round.

August Issues Challenge to Fruit and Vegetable Crop

Eleventh Hour Advice Given by Official of The Sherwin-Williams Co.

Home gardens and orchards, which have been properly cared for until now, give promise of splendid crops. August is a critical month, however, and unless fruits and vegetables are protected little will be left to show for a season's effort.

Conditions which are favorable to the development of fine crops of fruit and vegetables are equally favorable to the development of many insects and diseases that thrive at the expense of these crops," said A. J. Gunderson, a recognized crop expert, in a recent interview on saving the back yard garden and orchard. Mr. Gunderson, who is with the research division of The Sherwin-Williams Company, has made an intensive study of insects and diseases which have been seriously undermining the country's crops.

Protective Measures

"I advise every owner of home gardens and orchards, therefore, to protect his crops during August," continued Mr. Gunderson. "Gardens should be sprayed twice at two week intervals against leaf-spot, flea beetles and tomato worm. Peppers are subject to rot and should be sprayed twice at two week intervals as likewise should egg-plant which is also subject to rot.

"Look out for the Mexican bean beetle which requires frequent spraying. Watch for potato-bugs and leaf hoppers and also keep the vines covered with spray as a preventive of blight. Potatoes sprayed frequently with Bordeaux mixture will grow longer and yield more than unsprayed vines.

Two-fold Destroyer

"Spray grapes once more against berry moth and black rot. Spray apples once more against second brood of codling moth and late scab infection. Look out for brown rot on all varieties of plums and keep the fruit covered with spray until three weeks before picking.

"To simplify the spraying of fruits and vegetables in the home garden and orchards," said Mr. Gunderson in referring to the best preventive measures, "there has been perfected by chemists a combined insecticide and fungicide known as Dettol. It is recommended for use on the different plants mentioned which need special protection just at this season."

RADIO INDUSTRY THREATENED

"Unless something is done immediately, the very foundation upon which our business, radio broadcasting, is being built will quickly come under the control of an organization which has clearly within its power to financially bleed this industry to death," is the way Powell Crosley, Jr., analyzed conditions facing everybody connected with the manufacture and enjoyment of radio, at the recent meeting of the Radio Manufacturers' Association, with reference to the war now waging between the broadcasting stations of the United States and the Society of Artists and Composers.

to get a ton of COAL FREE

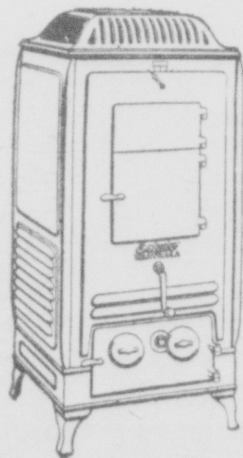

THE extraordinary opportunity we are offering comes only once a year. Thousands of people all over the country took advantage of it last year; many more thousands will join the Heatrola Free Coal Clubs this year.

Join the Heatrola Club Now!

A week flies by fast. Call or telephone soon, and let us present the complete details of this extraordinary proposition to you.

Estate Heatrola is the new-day way of home heating; more efficient than a basement furnace, easier to operate, and much easier on the coal pile. It is finished in grained mahogany enamel, and looks like a handsome piece of furniture.

It's your opportunity to secure free of charge a ton of coal in connection with the purchase of an Estate Heatrola. You pay a small amount to join the Club and this is applied to the purchase price of the Heatrola. Terms to suit your convenience can be arranged, and the Heatrola will be delivered at any time you may specify.

Shipping Figs From Port of Smyrna

A typical scene in Smyrna during the shipping season for figs. The streets and squares of the Asia Minor town are literally crammed with sacks of figs, ready for shipment to all parts of the world. The fruit is brought to the shipping center by caravans of camels from the growing districts.

Feed Calves Enough but Don't Overfeed

Do Best if Kept Just a Little Bit Hungry.

Feed the calves enough, but don't overfeed them. They will do better if kept just a little hungry. Overfeeding causes digestive troubles.

These are some of the suggestions made by the department of animal husbandry of the New York State Agricultural college at Ithaca on the raising and care of calves.

The first thing to remember, says the college, is that no calf should be raised for dairy use unless it comes of first-class parentage—from a pure bred sire and a high-producing dam. Granting this heritage, the dairy calf will respond to, and should receive, careful handling.

It is best to let the calves stay with their mothers for two or three days after birth. Then they should be taught to drink from a bucket. Care should be taken to see that the pail is clean for, as every farmer knows, calves are subject to digestive disorders.

The calf should get from 6 to 12 pounds of whole milk daily for the first three weeks and then may be gradually switched over to skim milk and a little grain. Most farmers find it best to give the calf its grain immediately after it has finished drinking the milk. A good concentrate allowance will contain muscle and bone-building nutrients and will contain some fat to replace a part of that abstracted from the milk.

Here are three rations which have been found good:

Corn 3 parts, bran 3 parts, oats 4 parts, oil meal 1 part.

Corn 5 parts, oats or bran 3 parts, oil meal 1 part.

Oats 3 parts, bran 1 part, oil meal 1 part.

Banking Celery Late in Summer Is Best Scheme

Most of the growth in celery occurs late in summer when the weather is beginning to turn cool and from then on till freezing weather. When the ground is becoming cool, in September, the soil should be pulled up around the plants a little at a time until it is half way to the top. Before much soil is drawn up, the bunches should be tied. This is quickly done by beginning at one end of a row with a ball of twine, one end of which is tied to a stake driven in the ground. Beginning with the first bunch of celery, draw the leaves together with one hand, and with the other make a turn of the string about that bunch, then on to the next without cutting the string, merely keeping it tight between stalks. In this way the leaves are held compactly together without being tied too tightly.

Not before frost should more earth be thrown up, for it tends to rot the stalks if banked while the weather is warm. Celery will stand a killing frost or even a light freeze without injury, but will be destroyed if frozen hard. When the earth is cool, some time between the first frost and the freezing of the ground, the soil should be drawn up from each side to within a few inches of the top. Double rows will save some labor in banking. Some make a practice of adding more earth with the approach of cold weather, then a covering of litter or corn fodder, so that the celery may be left where it grew through the winter storage period. This method requires a great deal of labor both in storing and taking out, and is not to be recommended.

FARM NOTES

Sweet clover can be pastured in the fall.

A fresh green forage crop will keep the growing pigs coming along fast.

Hens found on nests at night should be shut up. Broody hens reduce production.

Don't feed carcasses of animals that have died of disease to any of your stock or chickens.

Barley straw is similar to wheat straw, and barley hay has more protein and less fiber than timothy hay.

It is certainly worth while to give the sheep the very best possible care nowadays when wool and mutton are both scarce and high-priced.

More food animals were slaughtered in the United States last year than ever before. The total was 119,980,500, or about 1.1 for every man, woman and child in the country.

The consumption of milk in the United States has increased 25 per cent since 1920, but our per capita consumption is still lower than the principal dairy countries of Europe.

At least 50 per cent of all live-stock losses in transit are preventable by co-operation of the railroads, shippers and producers, say officials of the new Live Stock Loss Prevention Association of Ohio.

By storing vegetables for late fall and winter use and using a hotbed to produce for late winter and early spring, the summer garden can be supplemented and a supply of vegetables will be available the year round.

August Issues Challenge to Fruit and Vegetable Crop

Eleventh Hour Advice Given by Official of The Sherwin-Williams Co.

Home gardens and orchards, which have been properly cared for until now, give promise of splendid crops. August is a critical month, however, and unless fruits and vegetables are protected little will be left to show for a season's effort.

Conditions which are favorable to the development of fine crops of fruit and vegetables are equally favorable to the development of many insects and diseases that thrive at the expense of these crops," said A. J. Gunderson, a recognized crop expert, in a recent interview on saving the back yard garden and orchard.

Mr. Gunderson, who is with the research division of The Sherwin-Williams Company, has made an intensive study of insects and diseases which have been seriously undermining the country's crops.

Protective Measures

Home gardeners and orchardists, therefore, to protect his crops during August," continued Mr. Gunderson, "should be sprayed with special protection just at this time with a two-week interval against leaf-spot, flea beetles and tomato worm. Peppers are subject to rot and should be sprayed twice at two-week intervals as likewise should egg-plant which is also subject to rot.

"Look out" for the Mexican bean beetle which requires frequent spraying. Watch for potato-bugs and leaf hoppers and also keep the vines covered with spray as a preventive of blight. Potatoes sprayed frequently with Bordeaux mixture will grow longer and yield more than unsprayed vines.

Two-fold Destroyer

"Spray grapes once more against berry moth and black rot. Spray apples once more against second brood of codling moth and late scale infection. Look out for brown rot on all varieties of plums and keep the fruit covered with spray until three weeks before picking."

"To simplify the spraying of fruits and vegetables in the home garden and orchards," said Mr. Gunderson in referring to the best preventive measures, "there has been perfected by chemists a combined insecticide and fungicide known as Bestrov. It is recommended for use on the different plants mentioned which need special protection just at this season."

RADIO INDUSTRY THREATENED

"Unless something is done immediately, the very foundation upon which our business, radio broadcasting, is being built will quickly come under the control of an organization which has clearly within its power to financially bleed this industry to death," is the way Powell Crosley, Jr., analyzed conditions facing everybody connected with the manufacture and enjoyment of radio, at the recent meeting of the Radio Manufacturers' Association, with reference to the war now waging between the broadcasting stations of the United States and the Society of Artists and Composers.

Inventor Tests Radio Speakers

Charles D. Peterson, inventor of the Crosley musicone, is shown in the laboratory with every type of loud-speaker. He is testing each one for quality of music over the entire range, from low pipe organ to high violin tones. His contribution to the radio world is in actual use, it is designed to provide music picked up with a receiving set covering the entire musical range. The musicone on the floor is a large model designed for exhibition at radio shows.

The Withdrawal of the Candidate

When Miss Annie Oakley, the famous rifle shot, was traveling through the country giving exhibitions of her skill at theaters, she reached a small town in Texas; and her manager inserted an advertisement in the home paper for a smart colored boy to assist in the performance. Applicants were instructed to apply at the stage door of the local opera house at 1 p. m. sharp. When the manager arrived he found the passageway congested with little negroes, each eager to testify to his smartness. He made a selection, picking out a spry boy of about twelve. He took his applicant inside and stationed him near the wings.

"You will stand right here and not move," he said. "When the curtain goes up, Miss Oakley will come out and talk to the audience for a few moments. Then I will balance a small apple on your forehead and the lady will go over on the other side of the stage yonder and shoot it off."

The candidate grabbed for his hat, his eyes wildly rolling in search of the nearest path to safety.

"Mistah," he demanded, "who's goin' to shoot whut apple offer whose haid? Me, why I wouldn't let mah own mammy shoot no apple offer mah haid, let alone it's some stranger!"

And he was gone.

The Ways of the Army

A green recruit was having his first experience at doing sentry duty at one of the southern cantonments in 1917. Toward him through the darkness came a captain.

"Halt! Who goes there?" demanded the greenhorn.

"Officer of the day," came the answer.

"Beat it bo, before I run you in," said the sentry. "What the h—l would the officer of the day be doin' hangin' round at night?"

This story is matched by one that I had from a retired chaplain, who vouched for its authenticity:

The officer of the day was inspecting the guard.

"What are your orders?" he inquired of a drafted man.

"Sir," said the sentry, in his newly acquired military manner, "my orders are to be vigilant."

"What does vigilant mean?" said the officer.

"I don't know," said the sentry.

"Call the corporal of the guard and we'll find out," said the officer. The corporal of the guard came, and saluted.

"Corporal," said the officer, "this man here doesn't know the meaning of the word vigilant. Suppose you tell him."

"It means, sir, to be alert," answered the corporal promptly.

"And what does alert mean?" said the commander, anxious that the lesson should be driven home to the pupil.

"I don't know," said the corporal.

Out of Business Hours

To realize what the antiquity of this one is you first must look up the date of Gen. Tom Thumb's death and then hark still farther back to the yet more remote period when that little man was at the height of his fame.

Under the management of P. T. Barnum, the most famous of all our dwarfs was touring the country. Between engagements he stopped over Sunday at a country hotel in New England.

A lady of the neighborhood called and sent up her card with the request that she be permitted to meet the general. The message was received by a member of Barnum's staff, who happened at the moment to be in the general's room. This person, who was six feet tall and broad in proportion and something of a wit, asked that the lady be shown up.

Presently she knocked at the door and he answered it.

"I am looking," she said, "for Gen. Tom Thumb."

"Madam," he said, "proceed to look."

"Surely you are not the celebrated midget?" she cried.

"Certainly I am," he answered. "But just at the present moment, madam, I happen to be resting."

The Choice of Young Cohen

It so befell in the months preceding our entry into the World war that in a suburb of Chicago a preparedness league was organized. Swept away by patriotic love for his adopted country a youth named Cohen joined it. Now, military drill was a part of the duties of a member, and young Cohen did not take with any great amount of enthusiasm to this feature.

One evening the commander of his squad sought to liven him.

"Buck up, Herman!" he said. "You learn how to be a soldier, and some of these days you may go back to the old country—to Poland—and be a field marshal."

"I think," said Herman, "I'd rather stay here and be a Marshall Field."

Ensemble Doomed, Popularity Wanes

Women Have Tired of Outfit; Not So Practical as Was Promised.

With summer fashions crystallized it is consistent to take a peep into the future and ask—What next?

"Summer successes will be carried over into the fall," says Henri Bendel, New York fashion authority, "and short-lived fads and unpopular styles will be dropped."

"This means we shall have no diminution of chiffon and crepe frocks, printed or plain, and that high colors and unusual shadings and blendings will be featured."

"For the ensemble costume that was the rage this spring, the future is not so promising—at least, not for the ensemble as we now conceive it with matching coat and dress."

"In the first place, women have tired of it. That, you know, finishes any mode. In the second place, it is not so practical as it promised to be. Usually the dress outlasts the coat and the coat is useless without the dress, or the coat is highly satisfactory and the dress not so much so, making the combination bad."

Women will keep to this idea of harmony in dress, the authority asserts, and will buy no wrap without considering the costumes that are to be worn with it, but there will be less actual matching of materials and trimmings.

"As to lines in general, I anticipate no radical changes for a few months," he said. "The waistline is on its way up, I believe. The cut of the new coats with the flare at the hemline seems to indicate that there may be more of a waistline in evidence in six months."

"The low waistline, however, is too comfortable and easy to be relinquished easily."

"Skirts," Bendel pointed out, "are now worn very short and there is no reason to believe they will not continue to be for another season, but there are many longer models, too. Skirt lengths are now a matter between a woman and her own conscience. No woman need wear exaggerated short ones unless she likes to, and no well-dressed woman does."

"I see no return to somber colors, though doubtless darker colors will become popular later, and black cannot be ignored for any protracted length of time. Whites and pastel shades have never been more popular and they will be excellent for evening for months to come."

"I advise women," he concluded, "to learn to modify styles to suit themselves and to adopt styles that suit them individually, so there will never be radical changes from season to season."

Wide Fabrics Simplify Matters for Dressmaker

The introduction of materials that are 54 inches wide has done much to simplify matters for the home dressmaker who frequently found the problem of cutting and planning narrower fabrics to achieve the desired results almost beyond her ability.

Many of the frocks which come from the salons of certain of the best known Paris couturiers and American designers are adapted to the use of these wider materials. This makes the fashioning of summer frocks a pleasurable task and one not beyond the skill of an amateur who insures her success by purchasing materials of excellent quality and providing herself with a really good pattern.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. "You will stand right here and not move," he said. "When the curtain goes up, Miss Oakley will come out and talk to the audience for a few moments. Then I will balance a small apple on your forehead and the lady will go over on the other side of the stage yonder and shoot it off."

The candidate grabbed for his hat, his eyes wildly rolling in search of the nearest path to safety.

"Mistah," he demanded, "who's goin' to shoot whut apple offer whose haid? Me, why I wouldn't let mah own mammy shoot no apple offer mah haid, let alone it's some stranger!"

And he was gone.

The Ways of the Army

A green recruit was having his first experience at doing sentry duty at one of the southern cantonments in 1917. Toward him through the darkness came a captain.

"Halt! Who goes there?" demanded the greenhorn.

"Officer of the day," came the answer.

"Beat it bo, before I run you in," said the sentry. "What the h—l would the officer of the day be doin' hangin' 'round at night?"

This story is matched by one that I had from a retired chaplain, who vouched for its authenticity:

The officer of the day was inspecting the guard.

"What are your orders?" he inquired of a drafted man.

"Sir," said the sentry, in his newly acquired military manner, "my orders are to be vigilant."

"What does vigilant mean?" said the officer.

"I don't know," said the sentry.

"Call the corporal of the guard and we'll find out," said the officer. The corporal of the guard came, and saluted.

"Corporal," said the officer, "this man here doesn't know the meaning of the word vigilant. Suppose you tell him."

"It means, sir, to be alert," answered the corporal promptly.

"And what does alert mean?" said the commander, anxious that the lesson should be driven home to the pupil.

"I don't know," said the corporal.

Out of Business Hours

To realize what the antiquity of this one is you first must look up the date of Gen. Tom Thumb's death and then hark still farther back to the yet more remote period when that little man was at the height of his fame.

Under the management of P. T. Barnum, the most famous of all our dwarfs was touring the country. Between engagements he stopped over Sunday at a country hotel in New England.

A lady of the neighborhood called and sent up her card with the request that she be permitted to meet the general. The message was received by a member of Barnum's staff, who happened at the moment to be in the general's room. This person, who was six feet tall and broad in proportion and something of a wit, asked that the lady be shown up.

Presently she knocked at the door and he answered it.

"I am looking," she said, "for Gen. Tom Thumb."

"Madam," he said, "proceed to look."

"Surely you are not the celebrated midget?" she cried.

"Certainly I am," he answered.

"But just at the present moment, madam, I happen to be resting."

The Choice of Young Cohen

It so befell in the months preceding our entry into the World war that in a suburb of Chicago a preparedness league was organized. Swept away by patriotic love for his adopted country a youth named Cohen joined it. Now, military drill was a part of the duties of a member, and young Cohen did not take with any great amount of enthusiasm to this feature.

One evening the commander of his squad sought to liven him.

"Buck up, Herman!" he said. "You learn how to be a soldier, and some of these days you may go back to the old country—to Poland—and be a field marshal."

"I think," said Herman, "I'd rather stay here and be a Marshall Field."

Ensemble Doomed, Popularity Wanes

Women Have Tired of Outfit; Not So Practical as Was Promised.

With summer fashions crystallized it is consistent to take a peep into the future and ask—What next?

"Summer successes will be carried over into the fall," says Henri Bendel, New York fashion authority, "and short-lived fads and unpopular styles will be dropped."

"This means we shall have no diminution of chiffon and crepe frocks, printed or plain, and that high colors and unusual shadings and blendings will be featured."

"For the ensemble costume that was the rage this spring, the future is not so promising—at least, not for the ensemble as we now conceive it with matching coat and dress."

"In the first place, women have tired of it. That, you know, finishes any mode. In the second place, it is not so practical as it promised to be. Usually the dress outlasts the coat and the coat is useless without the dress, or the coat is highly satisfactory and the dress not so much so, making the combination bad."

Women will keep to this idea of harmony in dress, the authority asserts, and will buy no wrap without considering the costumes that are to be worn with it, but there will be less actual matching of materials and trimmings.

"As to lines in general, I anticipate no radical changes for a few months," he said. "The waistline is on its way up, I believe. The cut of the new coats with the flare at the hemline seems to indicate that there may be more of a waistline in evidence in six months."

"The low waistline, however, is too comfortable and easy to be relinquished easily."

"Skirts," Bendel pointed out, "are now worn very short and there is no reason to believe they will not continue to be for another season, but there are many longer models, too. Skirt lengths are now a matter between a woman and her own conscience. No woman need wear exaggeratedly short ones unless she likes to, and no well-dressed woman does."

"I see no return to somber colors, though doubtless darker colors will become popular later, and black cannot be ignored for any protracted length of time. Whites and pastel shades have never been more popular and they will be excellent for evening for months to come."

"I advise women," he concluded, "to learn to modify styles to suit themselves and to adopt styles that suit them individually, so there will never be radical changes from season to season."

Smart New Scarfs Are Made of Printed Silk

To add a note of color and dash to the all-white costume, one must wear one of the smart new scarfs of printed silk. This one has large black and orange polka dots on a white background, finished with a silk fringe of orange.

Wide Fabrics Simplify Matters for Dressmaker

The introduction of materials that are 54 inches wide has done much to simplify matters for the home dressmaker who frequently found the problem of cutting and planning narrower fabrics to achieve the desired results almost beyond her ability.

Many of the frocks which come from the salons of certain of the best known Paris couturiers and American designers are adapted to the use of these wider materials. This makes the fashioning of summer frocks a pleasurable task and one not beyond the skill of an amateur who insures her success by purchasing materials of excellent quality and providing herself with a really good pattern.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. OLD WARRIORS
LEARN LESSON
AT GRANT TOMB

Former Enemies Shook Hands
and Renewed Friendship
of Former Years.

How General Philip Sheridan and General Simon B. Buckner renewed their friendship at the funeral of General U. S. Grant, is told by W. P. Butler in a reminiscence published in the September McClure's Magazine.

Sheridan and Buckner had been friends at West Point. When the Civil war broke out Sheridan stayed with his command, while Buckner followed his state into the Confederacy. The two men directed opposing commands at Murfreesboro and Chickamauga.

On August 8, 1885, when General Grant's body was taken from the New York City hall to the tomb on Riverside drive, Buckner and Sheridan were named as honorary bearers. They rode in the same carriage in the procession.

Near Twenty-third street on Fifth avenue the procession halted. On opposite sides of the street regiments of former Union and Confederate soldiers were drawn up. As the men saw their old generals in the carriage they broke ranks and crowded about to shake hands.

Sheridan and Buckner turned and looked at each other as the blue and gray uniforms mingled. Then, as if by command of an unseen superior the former enemies shook hands. Their feud of 25 years had ended.

Fear and failure are synonyms.

FORD'S PAPER
THE DEARBORN
INDEPENDENT

Change in Policy—Public
Expects Certain Amount
of Advertising.

A change in the policy of Henry Ford's publication, the Dearborn Independent, was announced today. Advertising will be accepted beginning with October 3, 1925 issue of the Magazine.

The Dearborn Independent has not carried a line of paid advertising since it has been the property of Mr. Ford and the change in policy reflects growing feeling on the part of the public to expect as a buying guide a certain amount of advertising in magazines of its choice.

However, advertising in The Dearborn Independent is to be kept within certain definite limits. Under the new policy the magazine is to be increased in size from 32 pages to 48 pages, but the amount of space available in such issue will be only thirty-three and a third per cent of the total space inside, or, in the 48 page magazine only 16 pages will carry advertisements exclusive of covers. This rule is said to be unique in the publishing field. Other requirements are made relative to the kind and nature of advertising which will be acceptable.

The Dearborn Independent, then a small country weekly newspaper, was acquired by Mr. Ford in 1918. All paid advertising was dropped and the paper changed to a sixteen page magazine. In May of this year, with the installation of new presses, the magazine was increased to 32 pages of standard size. The Dearborn Independent, since becoming a Ford property, has been one of the most widely discussed publications in the world. It is distributed to over 600,000 paid subscribers.

FIVE OX TEAMS
INVADE CITY
OF LANCASTER

Animals are Being Taken to
Buckeye Lake to Clear
Marshy Ground.

A sight that no doubt carried the memory of old timers back to the pioneer days was witnessed on the Lancaster streets today noon when five yoke of oxen driven as one team passed thru the down town district. They are the property of Hiram Lamna, of Laurelville, Ohio. Accompanied by his brother Desmer, of 512 Washington avenue, this city, the oxen were being driven to Buckeye Lake where they will be used in clearing a piece of land on the north side. On account of the soft ground near the lake, neither a tractor or horses can be used, while the oxen are practically at home in such surroundings.

Mr. Lamna has been using oxen for many years in his logging operations south of Laurelville. The oxen are driven but seven miles a day and were three days in covering the twenty-one miles to Lancaster. They expect to complete their journey to the lake by the first of next week. Mr. Lamna stated that they could be driven twice as fast but that they were being taken slowly in order that their hoofs might not be injured.

The yoke of wheel oxen weigh 3800 pounds while each preceding yoke graduated in lighter weight proportionately.

Their ages ran from three to eleven years and they were reared and broken to yoke by their owner.

Roy Tobias, of the Tobias Art studio, was "Johnny on the Spot" as usual and secured some fine pictures of the oxen while passing the city hall.—Lancaster Eagle.

Mr. Lamna is a brother of Mrs. Edward Sensenbrenner, of this city.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

The sixteenth annual reunion of the Henry C. and Marian Bowsher Blacker family, was held Sunday, August 16, in the Van Meter grove and there were 71 in attendance. The day was ideal. All of the immediate family were present except Mrs. E. B. O. Dayton, of Mt. Vernon, Illinois, and Mrs. E. W. Hedges, of Columbus. At the noon hour a bounteous dinner was served. The children enjoyed the swings and various games and the men their annual game of barnyard golf. Those in attendance from a distance were; Mr. George C. Sims, Los Angeles, California; H. C. Blacker and daughter, Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Blacker and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. Russell Moore and J. G. Ward, Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Austin Gatlin, Ashland, Kentucky; Marian Rankin Blacker, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Ward and son, and Miss Jeannette Ward, Charleston, West Virginia.

The members of the family of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Robison gathered at the home of West Huston street Friday evening and tendered the latter a surprise. The event was in honor of her sixty-fifth birthday anniversary. Mrs. Robison was completely taken by surprise when she entered the parlor and found her six sons and her grandchildren there to greet and wish her many happy returns of the day. She was the recipient of many useful presents and bids fair to see many returns of her natal day, as she is enjoying the best of health.

WHISKERS ARE

Herbert Hoover Cultivated
Beard to Give An Appearance of Age.

Herbert Hoover was once forced to grow a beard to make himself look older. He told the story of his chin whiskers to Herman Bernstein, who has recounted it in an authoritative article upon the secretary of commerce in the September McClure's Magazine.

Hoover, aged 23, was in the employ of Louis Janin, one of the foremost mining engineers on the Pacific coast. He impressed Janin with his ability and Janin recommended Hoover for a position with an English firm.

On the eve of his departure for London, Hoover was called to Janin's office. "See here, Hoover," remarked the older man, "I've cabled to London swearing to your full technical qualifications and I'm not afraid that you'll let me down on that. But these conservative Englishmen have stipulated that you should be thirty-five years old. I have wired them that you were thirty-three. Don't forget that your reputation depends on your looking thirty-three by the time you get to London."

Hoover looked young for twenty-three and his only chance of adding ten years to his appearance was to grow a full beard, which he did on his way across the Continent and the Atlantic, much to the amusement of other train and steamship passengers.

When he reported to the head of the mining firm in London, the Englishman looked the youth over and said bluntly, "How remarkable you Americans are. You have not yet learned to grow old, either individually or as a nation. Now you, for instance. You don't look a day over twenty-five. How the devil do you do it?"

California Co-Eds Take
to "Solitary Tennis"

The latest sport to be introduced at the University of California is "solitary tennis."

The court for this game consists of a green board wall, with a horizontal line painted three feet above the ground to represent the top of the net. The player stands behind another line drawn on the ground 28 feet from the board. From here the ball is served against the wall above the white line. When it bounces back the racket wielder returns it, trying to hit the ball above the white line. If the ball hits below it is counted as a net ball and served again.

The game is popular with co-eds, who have found it increases the swiftness of their strokes and develops accuracy in placing the ball and agility in following it around the court.

The announcement that allopathic doctors of Texas have decided to modify their code of ethics and utilize newspapers advertising, will create more or less trouble in the union.

AMUSEMENTS

"The Little French Girl" is not written for a passing year or generation. Life (limpid, clear, beautiful, flows thru these pages. Picture follows unforgettable picture. Men and women speak; their voices vibrate with reality. They move; we see them catch their gestures, live with them. Here, undoubtedly, is a novel that is destined to stand for years as the finest study of "English and French life and character."

This is what they said of Anne Douglas Sedgwick's best selling novel when it first appeared, and now Paramount has taken this story and transferred it to the screen in a picture that should far out distance the book in popularity.

Produced by Herbert Brenon, who made "Peter Pan" the picture features Alice Joyce, Neil Hamilton, Mary Brian and Esther Ralston. The story is not unlike that of "Stella Dalls," but is handled in an entirely different manner.

Brenon isn't dealing with fairies this time, but the portrayal of men and women of today, with all their passions, base and sublime, their frailties and their reckless courage. And then there is "the little French girl" who is just budding into glorious womanhood and who undergoes a great dramatic experience for the sake of the mother she loves—the mother who "cannot help it if she is loved—the mother who "might be wrong, but not wicked; Maman could not be wicked."

Picture fans are going to love Mary Brian in her role of Alix Vervier. Alice Joyce, too, as the mother, was never more alluringly beautiful. Esther Ralston, Hamilton and all the others are ideally cast.

How in blazes do you expect a chap to frasp an opportunity when he has an armful of debts?

PROBATE COURT
REPORT FILED
FOR THE YEAR

Fines in 32 Liquor Cases
$10,150—Forty-seven Suits for Divorce.

The annual report of the probate court made by Judge Adkins, ending June 30, 1925 on liquor cases submitted to the secretary of state, Thad H. Brown, shows that he has had 44 liquor cases, of this number 32 were convicted, 5 were acquitted, four cases nolle and 3 still pending.

The fines on the 32 cases were $10,150, of this amount $1,627 has not been collected. The costs in the same cases were $596.92. Of this amount $28.18 was not collected.

Fines in juvenile cases were $400, all collected.

Inheritance tax collected for a period of one year from August 1, 1924 was $316.

Forty-seven suits for divorce are on the docket. Of this number 39 were filed during the year and 8 were pending from the preceding year; total number decided 36, pending 11 cases, number brought by the husband 13, by wife, 34, alimony was allowed in three cases.

The number of marriage licenses issued during the year, were, 234. Cupid was very busy during the month of December. Heretofore, the month of roses June, has been the favorite. The months are credited as follows: April, 15; May, 12; June, 19; July, 16; August, 17; September, 19; October, 22; November 21; December, 35; January, 20; February, 18; March, 20. Seven persons were found insane, six were sent to the Athens hospital and one to Columbus state hospital.

Three juveniles were sent to Industrial schools, one boy to Lancaster and two girls to the Delaware institution.

Sixty wills were probated, 57 testamentary letters were issued, 65 letters of administration were issued, and 117 estates were administered. Guardianship, 28 letters were issued, including 31 children, two letters for insane persons, and three letters for incompetents reason of old age.

It may be great fun to get revenge, but it is pretty certain to lead to the electric chair.—Philadelphia Record.

OLD WARRIORS
LEARN LESSON
AT GRANT TOMB

Former Enemies Shook Hands
and Renewed Friendship
of Former Years.

How General Philip Sheridan and General Simon B. Buckner renewed their friendship at the funeral of General U. S. Grant, is told by W. P. Butler in a reminiscence published in the September McClure's Magazine.

Sheridan and Buckner had been friends at West Point. When the Civil war broke out Sheridan stayed with his command, while Buckner followed his state into the Confederacy. The two men directed opposing commands at Murfreesboro and Chickamauga.

On August 8, 1885, when General Grant's body was taken from the New York City hall to the tomb on Riverside drive, Buckner and Sheridan were named as honorary bearers. They rode in the same carriage in the procession.

Near Twenty-third street on Fifth avenue the procession halted. On opposite sides of the street regiments of former Union and Confederate soldiers were drawn up. As the men saw their old generals in the carriage they broke ranks and crowded about to shake hands.

Sheridan and Buckner turned and looked at each other as the blue and gray uniforms mingled. Then, as if by command of an unseen superior the former enemies shook hands. Their feud of 25 years had ended.

Fear and failure are synonyms.

FORD'S PAPER
INDEPENDENT

Change in Policy—Public
Expects Certain Amount
of Advertising.

A change in the policy of Henry Ford's publication, the Dearborn Independent, was announced today. Advertising will be accepted beginning with October 3, 1925 issue of the Magazine.

The Dearborn Independent has not carried a line of paid advertising since it has been the property of Mr. Ford and the change in policy reflects growing feeling on the part of the public to expect as a buying guide a certain amount of advertising in magazines of its choice.

However, advertising in the Dearborn Independent is to be kept within certain definite limits. Under the new policy the magazine is to be increased in size from 32 pages to 48 pages, but the amount of space available in such issue will be only thirty-three and a third per cent of the total space inside, or, in the 48 page magazine only 16 pages will carry advertisements exclusive of covers. This rule is said to be unique in the publishing field. Other requirements are made relative to the kind and nature of advertising which will be acceptable.

The Dearborn Independent, then a small country weekly newspaper, was acquired by Mr. Ford in 1918. All paid advertising was dropped and the paper changed to a sixteen page magazine. In May of this year, with the installation of new presses, the magazine was increased to 32 pages of standard size. The Dearborn Independent, since becoming a Ford property, has been one of the most widely discussed publications in the world. It is distributed to over 600,000 paid subscribers.

FIVE OX TEAMS
INVADE CITY
OF LANCASTER

Animals are Being Taken to
Buckeye Lake to Clear
Marshy Ground.

A sight that no doubt carried the memory of old timers back to the pioneer days was witnessed on the Lancaster streets today noon when five yoke of oxen driven as one team passed thru the down town district. They are the property of Hiram Lamna, of Laurelville, Ohio. Accompanied by his brother Desmer, of 512 Washington avenue, this city, the oxen were being driven to Buckeye Lake where they will be used in clearing a piece of land on the north side. On account of the soft ground near the lake, neither a tractor or horses can be used, while the oxen are practically at home in such surroundings. Mr. Lamna has been using oxen for many years in his logging operations south of Laurelville. The oxen are driven but seven miles a day and were three days in covering the twenty-one miles to Lancaster. They expect to complete their journey to the lake by the first of next week. Mr. Lamna stated that they could be driven twice as fast but that they were being taken slowly in order that their hoofs might not be injured.

The yoke of wheel oxen weigh 3800 pounds while each preceding yoke graduated in lighter weight proportionately.

Their ages ran from three to eleven years and they were reared and broken to yoke by their owner.

Roy Tobias, of the Tobias Art studio, was "Johnny on the Spot" as usual and secured some fine pictures of the oxen while passing the city hall.—Lancaster Eagle.

Mr. Lamna is a brother of Mrs. Edward Sensenbrenner, of this city.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

The sixteenth annual reunion of the Henry C. and Marian Bowsher Blacker family, was held Sunday, August 16, in the Van Meter grove and there were 71 in attendance. The day was ideal. All of the immediate family were present except Mrs. E. B. O. Dayton, of Mt. Vernon, Illinois, and Mrs. E. W. Hedges, of Columbus. At the noon hour a bounteous dinner was served. The children enjoyed the swings and various games and the men their annual game of barnyard golf. Those in attendance from a distance were; Mr. George C. Sims, Los Angeles, California; H. C. Blacker and daughter, Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Blacker and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. J. Russell Moore and J. G. Ward, Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Austin Gatlin, Ashland, Kentucky; Mariam Rankin Blacker, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Ward and son, and Miss Jeannette Ward, Charleston, West Virginia.

The members of the family of Mr. and Mrs. I. N. Robison gathered at the home of West Huston street Friday evening and tendered the latter a surprise. The event was in honor of her sixty-fifth birthday anniversary. Mrs. Robison was completely taken by surprise when she entered the parlor and found her six sons and her grandchildren there to greet and wish her many happy returns of the day. She was the recipient of many useful presents and bids fair to see many returns of her natal day, as she is enjoying the best of health.

WHISKERS ARE WORTH WHILE
SOMETIMES

Herbert Hoover Cultivated
Beard to Give An Appearance of Age.

Herbert Hoover was once forced to grow a beard to make himself look older. He told the story of his chin whiskers to Herman Bernstein, who has recounted it in an authoritative article upon the secretary of commerce in the September McClure's Magazine.

Hoover, aged 23, was in the employ of Louis Janin, one of the foremost mining engineers on the Pacific coast. He impressed Janin with his ability and Janin recommended Hoover for a position with an English firm.

On the eve of his departure for London, Hoover was called to Janin's office. "See here, Hoover," remarked the older man, "I've cabled to London swearing to your full technical qualifications and I'm not afraid that you'll let me down on that. But these conservative Englishmen have stipulated that you should be thirty-five years old. I have wired them that you were thirty-three. Don't forget that my reputation depends on your looking thirty-three by the time you get to London."

Hoover looked young for twenty-three and his only chance of adding ten years to his appearance was to grow a full beard, which he did on his way across the Continent and the Atlantic, much to the amusement of other train and steamship passengers.

When he reported to the head of the mining firm in London, the Englishman looked the youth over and said bluntly, "How remarkable you Americans are. You have not yet learned to grow old, either individually or as a nation. Now you, for instance. You don't look a day over twenty-five. How the devil do you do it?"

California Co-Eds Take
to "Solitary Tennis"

The latest sport to be introduced at the University of California is "solitary tennis."

The court for this game consists of a green board wall, with a horizontal line painted three feet above the ground to represent the top of the net. The player stands behind another line drawn on the ground 25 feet from the board. From here the ball is served against the wall above the white line. When it bounces back the racket wielder returns it, trying to hit the ball above the white line. If the ball hits below it is counted as a net ball and served again.

The game is popular with co-eds, who have found it increases the swiftness of their strokes and develops accuracy in placing the ball and agility in following it around the court.

The announcement that allopathic doctors of Texas have decided to modify their code of ethics and utilize newspapers advertising, will create more or less trouble in the union.

"The Little French Girl" is not written for a passing year or generation. Life (limpid, clear, beautiful, flows thru these pages. Picture follows unforgettable picture. Men and women speak; their voices vibrate with reality. They move; we see them catch their gestures, live with them. Here, undoubtedly, is a novel that is destined to stand for years as the finest study of English and French life and character."

This is what they said of Anne Douglas Sedgwick's best selling novel when it first appeared, and now Paramount has taken this story and transferred it to the screen in a picture that should far out distance the book in popularity.

Produced by Herbert Brenon, who made "Peter Pan" the picture features Alice Joyce, Neil Hamilton, Mary Brian and Esther Ralston. The story is not unlike that of "Stella Dalls," but is handled in an entirely different manner.

Brenon isn't dealing with fairies this time, but the portrayal of men and women of today, with all their passions, base and sublime, their frailties and their reckless courage. And then there is "the little French girl" who is just budding into glorious womanhood and who undergoes a great dramatic experience for the sake of the mother she loves—the mother who "cannot help it if she is loved—the mother who "might be wrong, but not wicked; Maman could not be wicked."

Picture fans are going to love Mary Brian in her role of Alix Vervier. Alice Joyce, too, as the mother, was never more alluringly beautiful. Esther Ralston, Hamilton and all the others are ideally cast.

How in blazes do you expect a chap to frasp an opportunity when he has an armful of debts?

DISEASE MAY BE CAUSED BY SLEEPINESS

Scientific Theories Upset by Tests on Students—Other Effects Noted.

The world passes too much time in bed.

Too much sleep may cause certain diseases.

These are two conclusions that have suggested themselves to scientists as a result of tests at Georgetown university, where six students went sleepless for 60 hours and two for 80 hours.

Early analysis of the tests are so fraught with possibilities of important scientific discoveries that further tests will be made in the near future, it was stated recently.

The effects of sleepiness upon animals as well as upon human beings also will be made at that time, and under more rigorous conditions.

A surprising result of the first test is that white corpuscles of the blood were found to increase to a marked degree during the hours of wakefulness. Heretofore, the presence of more than the normal percentage of white corpuscles has been accepted as indicating the presence of infection.

Still another amazing discovery is that sugar contents of the blood remained virtually unchanged in all subjects. Sugar is the "fuel" that keeps the human machine in motion and physicians heretofore have believed that the machine is "re-fueled" during sleep.

The tests would appear to indicate that "re-fueling" is effected by eating rather than sleeping.

The tests definitely determine that loss of sleep has little effect upon one's mental efficiency, according to Dr. Fred A. Moss, of the university, who conducted the experiments. Furthermore, he found that a man's ability to withstand sleeplessness is no greater than that of a woman.

Many other effects of wakefulness were noted, but because of the nature of the test, they are not regarded as conclusive and are being withheld. They will be studied more carefully in forthcoming experiments.

FAYETTE COUNTY PREMIUMS.

Frank Schleich and son, of Monroe township, were awarded a number of premiums on Spotted Poland China hogs at the Fayette county fair. They secured first on senior champion and first on grand champion on boars, senior and grand champion on sows, three firsts, five seconds and two thirds on senior yearlings and junior pigs.

State of Ohio, Department of Commerce, Division of Insurance, Columbus, March 1, 1925.—As Superintendent of Insurance of the State of Ohio, I hereby certify that The Yorkshire Insurance Company Ltd., whose principal office is located at York, in England, has complied in all respects with the laws of this State applicable to it and is authorized during the current year to transact in this State its appropriate business of insurance as specified in its license. Its financial condition on the thirty-first day of December of the year next preceding the date hereof, is shown by its annual statement to have been as follows: aggregate amount of available assets, $3,495,611.76; aggregate amount of liabilities (except capital), including re-insurance, reserve, $1,987,777.82; net assets, $1,507,833.94; surplus, $1,507,833.94; amount of income for the year in cash, $2,217,938.27; amount of expenditures for the year in cash, $1,023,170.92.

In witness whereof, the undersigned subscribes his name and affixes the Seal of this Division, the day and year next above written.

WILMINGTON

Will Again Invade Circleville On Next Sunday.

One of the most critical and hard fought games of the season will be played at Mason's Field next Sunday afternoon, when the hard hitting Wilmington outfit tries to make it two straights from the local club. The Eagles are out for revenge for the defeat handed them last Sunday by the Wilmington club and they must win this game or lose first place in the League.

Dewey, the Eagles' star pitcher is again in good shape and Wilmington will have to go some to beat him. Hussa, Wilmington's pitcher, is just about the best hurler the locals have faced this season, and lives up to his reputation, having won his last three starts. Behind him he has just about the hardest hitting team in the league, Reardon, Botts, Dodds, Suttles and McCall being exceptionally hard hitters. This team as it stands now can give any ball club a stiff battle.

Circleville has held the lead all the last half of the season and now let us encourage them to retain it to the close.

The following is the batting averages of those having played in two games or more:

	AB.	H.	Pct.
Pettitt	42	17	.419
McGrainer	26	10	.384
Targee	48	17	.354
Flood	29	10	.344
Miller	52	15	.288
Baucher	7	2	.285
Dewey	39	11	.282
Allen	44	12	.272
Thompson	48	11	.229
Wilkins	9	2	.222
Donahue	14	2	.144

This gives an average for the eleven players of .293.

The league standing is as follows:

	W.	L.	Pc.
Circleville	3	2	.600
Wilmington	3	3	.500
Washington	3	3	.500
London	2	3	.400

HOGS FATTEN BUMPER CROP IS IN SIGHT

Number of Hogs Marketed Will Be Reduced by Sows Kept For Breeding.

This fall the Ohio farmer will have approximately 13 per cent less hogs and 45 per cent more corn than last year and rural economists at Ohio State university believe less hogs will be marketed this winter. More sows will be kept for breeding, they say.

In explaining these figures the economists point to previous estimates on the Ohio pig crop which shows only 80 per cent as many sows farrowed in Ohio this spring as last year and sows bred for fall farrowing fall below last fall. Larger litters than we expected have raised the pig crop to some extent, but there are still only 87 per cent as many pigs as last year.

C. J. West, statistician of the federal crop reporting service, says that if the weather continues favorable Ohio will have a total of 176,800,000 bushels of corn, or about 45 per cent more than last year. This yield is two million bushels more than the bumper crop of 1912 he says.

"Hogs eat the largest part of the corn raised in Ohio," says C. R. Arnold, a university economist. "These indications for somewhat cheaper corn than last year will encourage hog breeding, with the probability that the number of hogs marketed will be reduced by the sows kept at home for breeding."

Mr. West says the Ohio oat crop probably will also be increased by more than 10 per cent.

Very likely the British restrictions on marketing rubber will give the impetus needed for extensive rubber plantations in the Philippines. That would be a highly desirable result.

THE WORLD GOES A TURNING

I stand aloof
Watching a star,
What am I,
That stand and watch,
Two yards high—
More than a patch
Of blood and bones?
For a certain space,
More than a stone's
Smooth sightless face?
For a little time
A little more
Than the waves that climb
On a timeless shore?
More than water
And dust and all,
While pulses flutter
Their mystic small
Miraculous hour?
More than a bird
That has no power
Of weeping word?
More than creeping,
Leaping, winging
Creatures, weeping
Not all singing?
More than trees
That root in clay
More than these
For a little day?
In littleness
Proud and lonely,
I am less
Than God, only,
Two yards high,
Under a star
In a windy sky
Where thunders are,
I watch and sing!
And the long-swaying
Wind-bells ring;
And the churning, braying
Waters lash;
And a star floats burning,
And clouds crash—
And the world goes turning.

All the happily married women seem to be a little over-weight.

MAGIC MEDICINE.
There's a heap o' consolation
In the handclasp o' a friend;
It can wipe out desolation,
An' bring heartaches to an end;
It can soothe a troubled spirit
Like no magic in the land;
Heaven? You are pretty near it—
When a good friend grips your hand.

There's a heap o' satisfaction
In a friendly shoulder pat;
It's a simple little action—
But a mighty one, at that;
When firm fingers grip your shoulder
When you sort o' need a brace,

DISEASE MAY BE CAUSED BY SLEEPINESS
Scientific Theories Upset by Tests on Students—Other Effects Noted.

The world passes too much time in bed.
Too much sleep may cause certain diseases.
These are two conclusions that have suggested themselves to scientists as a result of tests at Georgetown university, where six students went sleepless for 60 hours and two for 80 hours.
Early analysis of the tests are so fraught with possibilities of important scientific discoveries that further tests will be made in the near future, it was stated recently.
The effects of sleepiness upon animals as well as upon human beings also will be made at that time, and under more rigorous conditions.
A surprising result of the first test is that white corpuscles of the blood were found to increase to a marked degree during the hours of wakefulness. Heretofore, the presence of more than the normal percentage of white corpuscles has been accepted as indicating the presence of infection.
Still another amazing discovery is that sugar contents of the blood remained virtually unchanged in all subjects. Sugar is the "fuel" that keeps the human machine in motion and physicians heretofore have believed that the machine is "re-fueled" during sleep.
The tests would appear to indicate that "re-fueling" is effected by eating rather than sleeping.
The tests definitely determine that loss of sleep has little effect upon one's mental efficiency, according to Dr. Fred A. Moss, of the university, who conducted the experiments. Furthermore, he found that a man's ability to withstand sleeplessness is no greater than that of a woman.
Many other effects of wakefulness were noted, but because of the nature of the test, they are not regarded as conclusive and are being withheld. They will be studied more carefully in forthcoming experiments.

FAYETTE COUNTY PREMIUMS.
Frank Schleich and son, of Monroe township, were awarded a number of premiums on Spotted Poland China hogs at the Fayette county fair. They secured first on senior champion and first on grand champion on boars, senior and grand champion on sow, three firsts, five seconds and two thirds on senior yearlings and junior pigs.

WILMINGTON
Will Again Invade Circleville On Next Sunday.
One of the most critical and hard fought games of the season will be played at Mason's Field next Sunday afternoon, when the hard hitting Wilmington outfit tries to make it two straights from the local club. The Eagles are out for revenge for the defeat handed them last Sunday by the Wilmington club and they must with this game or lose first place in the League.
Dewey, the Eagles' star pitcher is again in good shape and Wilmington will have to go some to beat him. Hussa, Wilmington's pitcher, is just about the best hurler the locals have faced this season, and lives up to his reputation, having won his last three starts. Behind him he has just about the hardest hitting team in the league, Reardon, Botts, Dodds, Suttles and McCall being exceptionally hard hitters. This team as it stands now can give any ball club a stiff battle.
Circleville has held the lead all the last half of the season and now let us encourage them to retain it to the close.
The following is the batting averages of those having played in two games or more:

	AB.	H.	Pct.
Pettitt	42	17	.419
McGrainer	26	10	.384
Targee	48	17	.354
Flood	29	10	.344
Miller	52	15	.288
Baucher	7	2	.285
Dewey	39	11	.282
Allen	44	12	.272
Thompson	48	11	.229
Wilkins	9	2	.222
Donahue	14	2	.144

This gives an average for the eleven players of .293.
The league standing is as follows:

	W.	L.	Pc.
Circleville	3	2	.600
Wilmington	3	3	.500
Washington	3	3	.500
London	2	3	.400

HOGS FATTEN BUMPER CROP IS IN SIGHT
Number of Hogs Marketed Will Be Reduced by Sows Kept For Breeding.

This fall the Ohio farmer will have approximately 13 per cent less hogs and 45 per cent more corn than last year and rural economists at Ohio State university believe less hogs will be marketed this winter. More sows will be kept for breeding, they say.
In explaining these figures the economists point to previous estimates on the Ohio pig crop which shows only 80 per cent as many sows farrowed in Ohio this spring as last year and sows bred for fall farrowing fall below last fall. Larger litters than we expected have raised the pig crop to some extent, but there are still only 87 per cent as many pigs as last year.
C. J. West, statistician of the federal crop reporting service, says that if the weather continues favorable Ohio will have a total of 176,800,000 bushels of corn, or about 45 per cent more than last year. This yield is two million bushels more than the bumper crop of 1912 he says.
"Hogs eat the largest part of the corn raised in Ohio," says C. R. Arnold, a university economist. "These indications for somewhat cheaper corn than last year will encourage hog breeding, with the probability that the number of hogs marketed will be reduced by the sows kept at home for breeding."
Mr. West says the Ohio oat crop probably will also be increased by more than 10 per cent.
Very likely the British restrictions on marketing rubber will give the impetus needed for extensive rubber plantations in the Philippines. That would be a highly desirable result.

THE WORLD GOES A TURNING
I stand aloof
Watching a star,
What am I,
That stand and watch,
Two yards high—
More than a patch
Of blood and bones?
For a certain space,
More than a stone's
Smooth sightless face?
For a little time
A little more
Than the waves that climb
On a timeless shore?
More than water
And dust and all,
While pulses flutter
Their mystic small
Miraculous hour?
More than a bird
That has no power
Of weeping word?
More than creeping,
Leaping, winging
Creatures, weeping
Not all singing?
More than trees
That root in clay
More than these
For a little day?
In littleness
Proud and lonely,
I am less
Than God, only,
Two yards high,
Under a star
In a windy sky
Where thunders are,
I watch and sing!
And the long-swaying
Wind-bells ring;
And the churning, braying
Waters lash;
And a star floats burning,
And clouds crash—
And the world goes turning.
All the happily married women seem to be a little over-weight.

MAGIC MEDICINE.
There's a heap o' consolation
In the handclasp o' a friend;
It can wipe out desolation,
An' bring heartaches to an end;
It can soothe a troubled spirit
Like no magic in the land;
Heaven? You are pretty near it—
When a good friend grips your hand.
There's a heap o' satisfaction
In a friendly shoulder pat;
Its a simple little action—
But a mighty one, at that;
When firm fingers grip your shoulder
When you sort o' need a brace,
Makes you stronger, braver, bolder,
An' more fit to run the race!
When you're full o' worry pizen,
An' the world is looking drear,
There's a heap o' energizin'
In a little pill o' cheer!
When some little frets distress you,
They put nectar in your cup—
Little phrases like "God bless you!"
An' that other one, "Cheer up!"

An automobile has just been driven from Darwin across Australia to Adelaide, a distance of 2,091 miles, in nine days and nine hours elapsed time. Much of the route was over bushmen's trails. The driver had to carry his own food, and gasoline was sent ahead by camel team and buried in caches.

A Case of Dual Personality

By EDWARD LEVINE

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

"HOW long have we been living here, Mary?" asked Henderson. "Why, nearly three years, dear—ever since our marriage," answered his wife. "You're not tired of it, are you?"

"No, indeed. It's the nicest home I've ever had," answered Henderson. He stooped and kissed the little girl who came toddling into the room, put on his hat and went down to the bank, where he was employed.

Henderson had been pumping his wife craftily for days. The fact was he had awakened one morning with utter ignorance of who he was, or anything that had happened to him. He remembered that he was employed in the bank; he knew his acquaintances—that was all. Three years before he had stood at Mary's side and pledged his vows to her. Before that—nothing. How he came to be there—nothing. The past was a complete blank to him.

And because he would not for the world hurt the little woman who loved and trusted him, he had been working very carefully and methodically to learn the truth. He had discovered his name from an old letter. And very mistily he was beginning to remember events of the three past years. But before then—oblivion!

Stark oblivion! That was what frightened him so. He was intelligent enough to know that it was a case of dual personality. He had discovered that he was considered forgetful and absent-minded, so it was possible to hide the truth from his wife while making his investigations. And, most fortunately, the one thing that did persist was a complete memory of business matters at the bank.

"Morning, Henderson. I see they're going to vote Jackman into the Hall of Fame," said one of his associates at the bank.

"Jackman?"

"Why, the famous novelist. You've read Jackman's books?"

"Never heard of him. I don't take any interest in literature," said Henderson as he took off his coat.

He could not endure literature; the newspaper, he always said, was enough for him.

"You're a queer cuss not to have heard of Jackman," replied his friend. "Why, he was the great popular writer when he died, five years ago."

"So he's dead, eh?"

"Yes. Disappeared. Body found in the woods six months later supposed to have been his, though he was never absolutely identified. But Jackman's dead all right. Funny thing, he was born not far from here. Here's his picture in the paper. Looks something like you'd look, Henderson, if you let your hair grow long."

Henderson took the paper and gave a mechanical glance at it. And in that instant he knew.

He was Jackman, and everything came back with a rush, flooding his consciousness. Those years of popular novel-writing, his hatred of the slavery imposed upon him by the public demand. His resolution to be rid of a task that was becoming more and more difficult. The impossibility of writing any more of his foolish plots. His weariness of life. Then that night he wandered away into the woods, feeling that an unbearable crisis had come upon him.

And then—the sudden stark oblivion.

And a great flood of happiness welled up in his heart as he remembered that as Jackman he had been unmarried.

Thank God, he could keep Mary. He could go home with a quiet heart.

Even though he was harassed with debts, though Mary and he so longed to buy their little house and have their own home. Then the things they needed. . . .

"Does look like me," he admitted. "I wish I could make the money this guy must have made—"

"Money?" exclaimed the other. "Say, did you read that? There's a hundred thousand dollars Jackman left, still lying in the bank unclaimed, because he left no relations."

"That so?" said Henderson.

He smiled as he went into the cashier's cage. For he knew that he must be altogether Henderson, the plodding bank clerk, or altogether Jackman, the harassed popular writer, selling his soul and hating it. And that left him no alternative.

Destitute.

Two tramps met at the local tavern at the end of a long and unsuccessful day's begging. Both were tired and hungry, and gazed with longing eyes at their empty glasses.

"Didn't you make anything, Bill?" inquired one. "What about that house I saw you looking at—the big one with the open window?"

"Didn't trouble to ask," was the reply. "I looked in at the window and saw two girls playing on one piano, so I guessed they was too poor for me to worry."

Chasing the Turtle.

Farmer Geehaw's hired man was very slow, a topic upon which the old gentleman was wont to comment. One afternoon the worthy agriculturist came in from the yard and began to rattle the pots and pans in the kitchen.

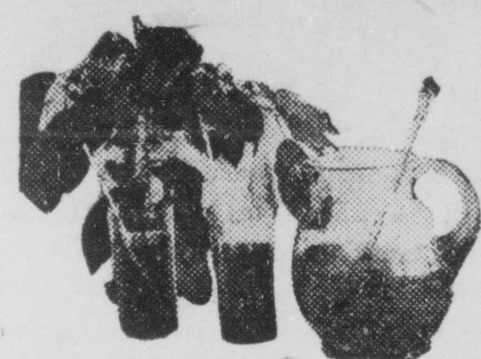

"What is it, paw?"

"The hired man—"

"Yes, yes. What's he up to?"

"He's chasing a turtle, maw. If he catches it, we'll have turtle soup for supper. I think he's gettin'—"

Economical Ambrosia

THE cool, refreshing fruit drink is one of the joys of summertime. The juice of canned fruits, combined with lemon or orange juice is delicious. The housewife will find this a real economy, as well as a handy method of preparing a cooling drink in the shortest possible time.

The economy lies in the fact that the canned fruit from which the juice is drained for this purpose may be mixed with other fruits to make an excellent salad. The juice from the can—of berries, peaches, cherries, apricots, or pineapple—may be mixed with orange or sweetened lemon juice, and poured over chopped ice. The result is a delicious beverage. When this ambrosial concoction is made with the juice of canned strawberries, cherries, blackberries, or raspberries, beauty of color is added to its attractions.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

"You're a queer cuss not to have heard of Jackman," replied his friend. "Why, he was the great popular writer when he died, five years ago."

"So he's dead, eh?"

"Yes. Disappeared. Body found in the woods six months later supposed to have been his, though he was never absolutely identified. But Jackman's dead all right. Funny thing, he was born not far from here. Here's his picture in the paper. Looks something like you'd look, Henderson, if you let your hair grow long."

Henderson took the paper and gave a mechanical glance at it. And in that instant he knew.

He was Jackman, and everything came back with a rush, flooding his consciousness. Those years of popular novel-writing, his hatred of the slavery imposed upon him by the public demand. His resolution to be rid of a task that was becoming more and more difficult. The impossibility of writing any more of his foolish plots. His weariness of life. Then that night he wandered away into the woods, feeling that an unbearable crisis had come upon him.

And then—the sudden stark oblivion.

And a great flood of happiness welled up in his heart as he remembered that as Jackman he had been unmarried.

Thank God, he could keep Mary. He could go home with a quiet heart.

Even though he was harassed with debts, though Mary and he so longed to buy their little house and have their own home. Then the things they needed. . . .

"Does look like me," he admitted. "I wish I could make the money this guy must have made—"

"Money?" exclaimed the other. "Say, did you read that? There's a hundred thousand dollars Jackman left, still lying in the bank unclaimed, because he left no relations."

"That so?" said Henderson.

He smiled as he went into the cashier's cage. For he knew that he must be altogether Henderson, the plodding bank clerk, or altogether Jackman, the harassed popular writer, selling his soul and hating it. And that left him no alternative.

Destitute.

Two tramps met at the local tavern at the end of a long and unsuccessful day's begging. Both were tired and hungry, and gazed with longing eyes at their empty glasses.

"Didn't you make anything, Bill?" inquired one. "What about that house I saw you looking at—the big one with the open window?"

"Didn't trouble to ask," was the reply. "I looked in at the window and saw two girls playing on one piano, so I guessed they was too poor for me to worry!"

Chasing the Turtle.

Farmer Geehaw's hired man was very slow, a topic upon which the old gentleman was wont to comment. One afternoon the worthy agriculturist came in from the yard and began to rattle the pots and pans in the kitchen.

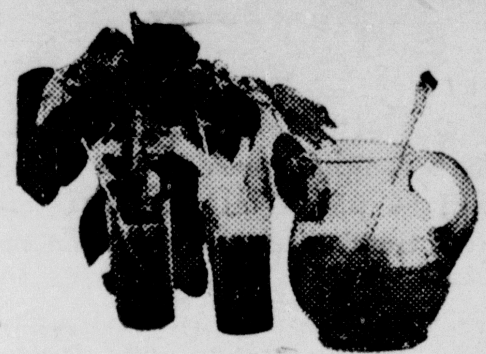

"What is it, paw?"

"The hired man—"

"Yes, yes. What's he up to?"

"He's chasing a turtle, maw. If he catches it, we'll have turtle soup for supper. I think he's gal-ing."

Economical Ambrosia

THE cool, refreshing fruit drink is one of the joys of summer-time. The juice of canned fruits, combined with lemon or orange juice is delicious. The housewife will find this a real economy, as well as a handy method of preparing a cooling drink in the shortest possible time.

The economy lies in the fact that the canned fruit from which the juice is drained for this purpose may be mixed with other fruits to make an excellent salad. The juice from the can—of berries, peaches, cherries, apricots, or pineapple—may be mixed with orange or sweetened lemon juice, and poured over chopped ice. The result is a delicious beverage. When this ambrosial concoction is made with the juice of canned strawberries, cherries, blackberries, or raspberries, beauty of color is added to its attractions.

Anyhow you haven't heard Abdel Krim boast any about eating Christmas dinner in Fez.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

Early Ship Lanterns Valued by Collectors

One of the phases of the present vogue for collecting anything connected with the old-time ships is that of earnestly seeking their lanterns or lamps, and very interesting and decorative, with the right surroundings, many of them are.
Numerous lamps are traded as ship's lanterns which never went to sea, says
Capt. E. A. McCann in the Antiquarian,
New York. If, however, it is a good-looking lamp and the owner is pleased with it, its history is perhaps not so very important, but if one wishes to be sure of the right nautical flavor,
some recreation is necessary.
An intimate knowledge of ships and their ways is the best method of discriminating; but as a general index
it may be stated that, to circumvent
the uneasy motion of a vessel at sea, every ship lamp is built, either to swing from a handle or ring, or to securely fasten by the back, or, occasionally, by the base; within these limits
there are many types.
The very earliest ship lanterns were metal cages erected in some prominent part of the ship, as a rule over the stern, into which some combustible,
such as tow and resin, could be ignited to give warning to another ship and avert collision. This, in fact, is the only purpose, for exterior lights to this day, and they are carefully screened so as not to shine aboard, because any light on the deck is only a nuisance, so far as navigation is concerned, and even on the brilliantly lit modern steamship it may be noticed that all lights are screened from the bridge.
The frigates and ships-of-the-line which followed in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries had very similarly designed lanterns, only more elaborate in their ornamentation and careful in construction.
Any of these are, however, almost impossible to obtain, and are more suited to museums than to domestic use. Those vessels would also use cabin, gun-deck and other hand-lanterns, which again are extremely rare,
though very desirable.

Italy's New Air Service

It is announced semi-officially that within the coming months Italy is to have its first regular civilian air traffic. Four lines are now decided upon —from Rome to Barcelona, Turin to Trieste, Trieste to Venice and Brindisi to Constantinople via Saloniki. It is not announced what subsidy will be supplied by the state, but it is taken for granted that a large subsidy will be necessary. Italy feels she has been backward in civil aviation. The newspaper Epoca says that when the fascist government came into power it found that the mechanical equipment of the aviation department consisted chiefly of typewriters. Now, it feels, Italy will be able to take her place on a basis of equality with Germany, France and England. Meanwhile Italy has consistently rejected offers of foreign companies to extend their air service to Italy. Such international lines will now be permitted, it is stated, but only if Italy retains the predominant part of the traffic.

In Buddy's Family

Buddy is a very little boy living in a city in northeastern Indiana. Although he is only three years old, his sayings are sometimes very eloquent.
Buddy, like many other little boys, is sometimes naughty and he is sometimes punished. A few days ago he was visiting at the home of one of his little girl playmates. This girl was an only child and although she was sometimes naughty she was not punished very many times. She was, at the time of Buddy's visit, exceptionally bad and her mother wishing to quiet her said to Buddy, "Marjorie is naughty today, isn't she Buddy?" "Uh huh; if she was one of my mother's children she would get a whippin'," said Buddy knowingly.—Indianapolis
News.

$50,000 Radio Story

Here is a prize radio story told to Eric H. Palmer on his visit in connection with his radio exploration tour of the country. According to a San Francisco dealer, he was asked to ship a receiver with full equipment, including a power amplifier and a score of extra tubes, to China. Asking the purchaser how much he expected to hear in China, the dealer was told:
"Oh, I don't expect to get much broadcasting out there, but I've got to do something evenings. I've been playing poker and mah-jongg and what not and losing $200 to $1,000 nightly and I just can't stop, but if I get the
"listening-in" habit I'll be about $25-000 to $50,000 ahead in about a year, the way my luck's going, and I'll be having more fun besides."

Almonds in Demand

An indicated increase in the production of almonds in the United States has led to a study by the bureau of plant industry of the possible utilization of certain varieties of domestic almonds in the manufacture of food products. The domestic crop is at present largely consumed in the unshelled nut trade, while the large quantity of nuts required for such products as almond bars and almond paste is supplied principally from European sources.—New York Times.

Population Estimate

The population of the United States is now nearly 114,400,000, according to estimates by the National Bureau of Economic Research. This, according to the bureau, indicates that our growth in this respect is slowing down.

MAGIC OF RODEO ROPERS

Wizards with iron wrists, who can send a lasso snapping through the air with the accuracy of a rifle bullet, will work their magic when famous ropers will meet at the Chicago Roundup and World's Championship Rodeo to be held for nine days, beginning August 15. A good portion of the prizes put up by the Chicago Association of Commerce, under whose auspices the cowboy contests will be held, is set aside for the ropers. Champions, past and present, have written Tex Austin, that they will be on hand to compete for the awards and the world's championship title. Austin, who has put on many big rodeos, will direct the Chicago contests. A steer or calf in action makes remarkable speed and to send the loop of the lariat whipping through the air and to have it land unerringly around horns or neck is one of the most difficult of cowboy feats. To do this and then to throw and tie the animal must be the work of only a few seconds. The experts are bringing their own roping ponies, so intelligent and highly trained that some are almost priceless.

SCHOOLS

With the employment of Miss Jennette Brown, of Sedalia, as teacher of music for the coming year, the board of education now has a full corps of teachers for the opening of school which will commence on Monday, September
7th. Only a short session will be held on the first day but classes will start on Tuesday, September 8th.
The other teachers employed in the Williamsport schools for the coming year are:

land; High School, Mr. Walter F.

Said Tract No. 5 is situated on the north side of the said Circleville and Darbyville Turnpike, which is a well improved road, four miles of which is hard road, and the balance graded and graded. Tract No. 5 contains about 40 acres of virgin woodland and is about 7 miles from Circleville, and it touches Darby Creek on the north side.

Tract No. 5 contains 90 acres of land and is appraised at $5,400.00.

Tract Number 6.—In Hans Baker's Survey 7947; beginning at a stake in the west bank of Darby Creek from which a sugar tree, 14 inches in diameter, bears S. 47 degrees W. 23 feet, a white elm 12 inches in diameter bears S. 59 1/2 degrees E. 6 feet and a blue ash tree, 24 inches in diameter, bears N. 82 degrees W. 16 feet; thence with the creek bank N. 37 1/2 degrees W. 310 feet to a stake; thence N. 23 degrees W. 420 feet to a stake; thence N. 14 1/2 degrees W. 445 feet to a stake; thence N. 27 1/2 degrees W. 597 feet to a hackberry tree, 8 1/2 inches in diameter from which a sycamore 20 inches in diameter, bears N. 88 1/2 degrees W. 27 1/2 feet and red elm 8 inches in diameter bears S. 63 1/2 degrees W. 24 feet; thence S. 48 degrees W. 22 1/2 feet to a stone at the west edge of the grade of the Darbyville Turnpike; thence with said pike S. 64 degrees, 54 minutes E. 1321 feet to a stone in the center of said pike; thence S. 41 1/2 degrees W. 1421 feet to a stone northeast corner to W. C. Hill's land; thence with his line S. 54 degrees E. 1207 feet to a stone in said line; thence N. 43 1/2 degrees E. 2155 feet to the beginning, containing 110.90 acres of land, more or less, and also the following land in Hans Baker's Survey No. 7947 and beginning at a stone in the south line of said Survey and in the north line of Presley Thornton's Survey No. 468; thence with the line S. 44 1/2 degrees E. 2116 feet to a stone, formerly a sugar tree on the bank of Darby Creek; thence with the creek S. 74 degrees W. 990 feet to a stake; thence W. 182 feet to a stake; thence N. 69 degrees, 7 minutes W. 468 feet to a stake; thence N. 49 degrees 17 minutes W. 416 feet to a stake; thence N. 43 degrees, 41 minutes W. 196 feet to a stake from which a sugar tree, 15 inches in diameter bears S. 47 1/2 degrees W. 23 feet to a white elm, 12 inches in diameter, bears S. 59 1/2 degrees E. 6 feet and a blue ash stump 24 inches in diameter bears N. 82 degrees W. 16 feet; thence S. 43 1/2 degrees W. 2155 feet to a stone in the line of W. C. Hill's land; thence with his line S. 54 degrees E. 1662 feet to the beginning, containing 88.22 acres of land, more or less.

Said Tract No. 6 is located on both sides of the said Circleville and Darbyville Turnpike at its intersection with the county road known as the Hill Road, and is about 9 1/2 miles from Circleville. This farm has a two story frame dwelling house of ten rooms, a large barn with crib and wagon shed, garage, tool shed and chicken house and other outbuildings, tenant's house and a barn in connection with it, 3 wells and a wind pump, and the farm is well tiled. All the buildings are in good repair. Tract No. 6, as herein described, is divided into two tracts, but will be offered as a whole.

Tract No. 6 contains 199.12 acres of land, and is appraised at $17,910.00. Running water at all times of the year on each of these tracts.

FREE OF DOWER.
All these tracts of land are on good roads in a township having a well established centralized school, within a short distance of churches, all good soil, adapted to raise corn, wheat, oats, hay, truck and stock, and most of this land is now in a high state of cultivation.

TERMS OF SALE:—One-third cash in hand, one-third in one year and one-third in two years from day of sale, with interest. The payments to be secured by a mortgage upon the premises sold.

Early Ship Lanterns Valued by Collectors

One of the phases of the present vogue for collecting anything connected with the old-time ships is that of earnestly seeking their lanterns or lamps, and very interesting and decorative, with the right surroundings, many of them are.

Numerous lamps are traded as ship's lanterns which never went to sea, says Capt. E. A. McCann in the Antiquarian, New York. If, however, it is a good-looking lamp and the owner is pleased with it, its history is perhaps not so very important, but if one wishes to be sure of the right nautical flavor, some recollection is necessary.

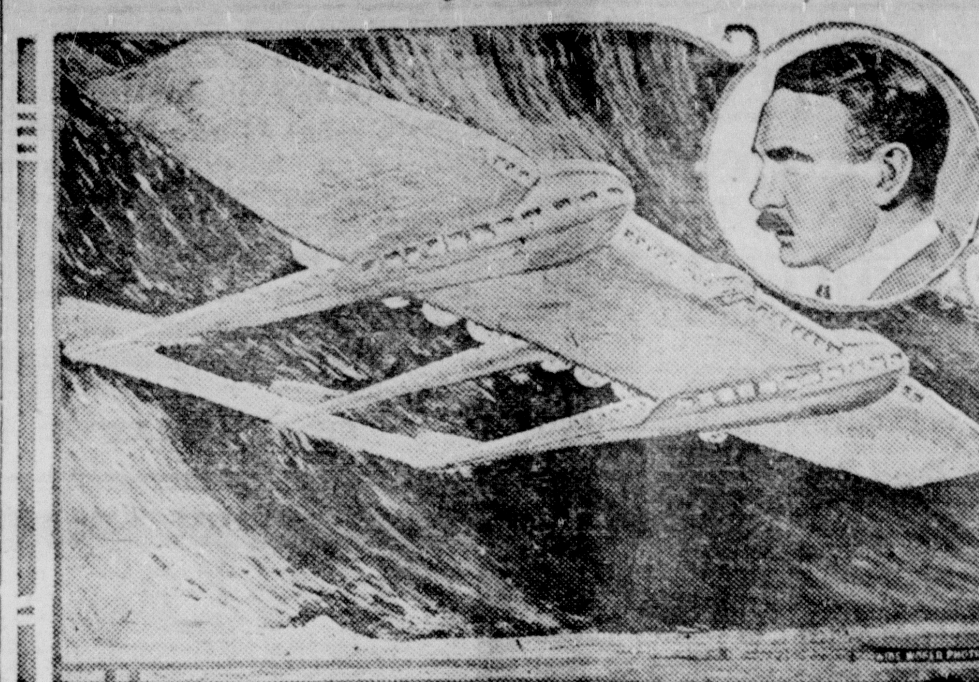

An intimate knowledge of ships and their ways is the best method of discriminating; but as a general index it may be stated that, to circumvent the uneasy motion of a vessel at sea, every ship lamp is built, either to swing from a handle or ring, or to be securely fastened by the back, or, occasionally, by the base; within these limits there are many types.

The very earliest ship lanterns were metal cages erected in some prominent part of the ship, as a rule over the stern, into which some combustible, such as tow and resin, could be ignited to give warning to another ship and avert collision. This, in fact, is the only purpose, for exterior lights to this day, and they are carefully screened so as not to shine aboard, because any light on the deck is only a nuisance, so far as navigation is concerned, and even on the brilliantly lit modern steamship it may be noticed that all lights are screened from the bridge.

The frigates and ships of the line which followed in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries had very similarly designed lanterns, only more elaborate in their ornamentation and careful in construction.

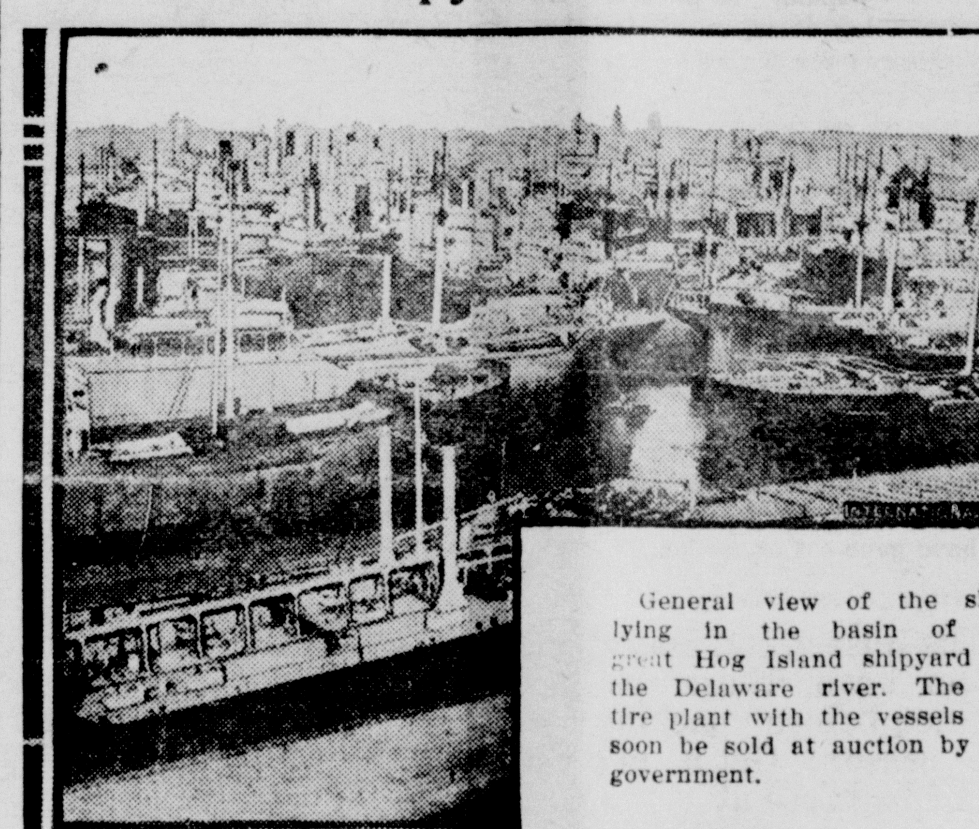

Any of these are, however, almost impossible to obtain, and are more suited to museums than to domestic use. Those vessels would also use cabin, gun-deck and other hand-lanterns, which again are extremely rare, though very desirable.

MAGIC OF RODEO ROPERS

Wizards with iron wrists, who can send a lasso snapping through the air with the accuracy of a rifle bullet, will work their magic when famous ropers will meet at the Chicago Roundup and World's Championship Rodeo to be held for nine days, beginning August 15. A good portion of the prizes put up by the Chicago Association of Commerce, under whose auspices the cowboy contests will be held, is set aside for the ropers. Champions, past and present, have written Tex Austin, that they will be on hand to compete for the awards and the world's championship title. Austin, who has put on many big rodeos, will direct the Chicago contests. A steer or calf in action makes remarkable speed and to send the loop of the lariat whipping through the air and to have it land unerringly around horns or neck is one of the most difficult of cowboy feats. To do this and then to throw and tie the animal must be the work of only a few seconds. The experts are bringing their own roping ponies, so intelligent and highly trained that some are almost priceless.

SCHOOLS

With the employment of Miss Jennette Brown, of Sedalia, as teacher of music for the coming year, the board of education now has a full corps of teachers for the opening of school which will commence on Monday, September 7th. Only a short session will be held on the first day but classes will start on Tuesday, September 8th.

The other teachers employed in the Williamsport schools for the coming year are:

Superintendent, R. E. Copeland; High School, Mr. Walter F. Rosenthal, Miss Lenore Tharp, Miss Jennette Brown; Grades, Mrs. Mary Norton Lloyd, Miss Waneta McNeal, Miss Elizabeth Whitten, Miss Mary White, Miss Twila West, Miss Helen Smith, Miss Fern Ater and Miss Theuredda Boots.—Williamsport News.

PENROD PLAYS MAKE APPEAL TO CHILDREN

Hays Committee Organized to Deal With Problem of Movies For Children.

The committee of investigation which Will Hays organized to deal with the problem of suitable movies for children has reported the American children want "sports and Penrod" film plays Fantasies like the "Thief of Bagdad" and "Peter Pan" are not so popular as pictures with horse and dog stars, or stories that have children for heroes.

The complete story of the committee's report is told by Kenneth W. Payne in the September McClure's Magazine. He quotes the reports of theater managers in Washington D. C., Rochester, New York, Atlanta, Georgia, where Saturday morning children's movies have had a practical trial. In those cities and in many others, the work of the better films committee has been very successful.
